The Interviewer.

What's the use of patronizing the fly-by night, barn storming companies when Carson has the local talent right here at home to give better entertainment?

The operetta "The Interviewer," has crowded the Opera House two nights, and it satisfied every man, woman and child in the audience. It was well staged, well costumed and well acted throughout.

Mr. John P. Meder always put a play on a little better than the last one.

This last probably sets the pace for all future work at the Opera House, as it would be difficult to imagine how he could improve on it.

Miss Amy Meder played the part of "Sonia" very naturally and effectively, and her singing was very much appreciated by the audience, which applauded her heartily.

Frank Bryant played the title role of the piece in a way that showed he had made a study of it. Miss Edith Howe was a delightful Fairy Queen.

In the cast was Lottie Meder as "Stella," Charlie Southworth as "Puck," Miss Jessie Oliver as "Madam Blue," and Ross Meder as "Skip," and were, as the gallery boys remarked, "way up."

Among the singers were Messrs. Mather, Cobb, Cushing and King, and their voices showed careful training and drilling.

In the second act there was a set scene representing the interior of a country office, and the one on the stage was modeled somewhat after the APPEAL composing room, only the stage interior was a good deal cleaner. The "types" were Jessie Fryer, Emma Brulin, Amy Meder, Blanche Davis, Nettie Spurgeon, Lottie Meder, Edith Howe, Neva Wilson, Lottie Gladding and Leonora Maish, and as a matter of course were a good deal tidier than the APPEAL compositors. Prof. Louis Jacobson showed up quite "wide as the orchestra leader.

The gnomes in the Interviewer were simply great, though they received no mention before.

Death of Miss Cohn.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Mamie Cohn died of typhoid fever. She was a very lovable and popular young lady and her loss will be keenly felt in this city. She was 21 years of age and leaves three brothers, Abe, Hyman and Sam, and a twin sister, Dora. The funeral will take place from the family residence at 2 p. m. today.

Friends and acquaintances are invited to attend.

FARMER SWEENEY.

He Aims His Agricultural Views to the Convention.

During the progress of the Irrigation Convention Farmer Sweeney took quite a lively interest in the proceedings but owing to the large number of speeches made by other irrigators, his part of the performance was necessarily crowded out.

In the morning Farmer Sweeney harnessed up his old flea bitten mare and ambled into town, telling his wife that he had written a speech on irrigation and should deliver it with great effect.

While driving in, the old mare shied at a clump of sagebrush in the road and sent the manuscript of the speech flying in every direction. He did not realize his loss until he reached his place of business in the city. But what he lost in speeches he made up in enthusiasm for the cause of irrigation. He announced that the Convention could take his entire ranch and all the stock if it needed the sinews of war to carry on the irrigation fight.

By 10 o'clock he was ready to sell Gibraltar to public auction and devote it to the cause.

He was heart and soul for irrigation and he invited the visiting members to irrigate every five minutes.

"Barkeep," he said to his man in the saloon, "turn loose the bar to all who come. Let no friend of irrigation or water storage go away empty. Its all at my expense. Boys let's have something right now."

When the Convention met Farmer Sweeney put on his regular ranch clothes and took a front seat. He listened attentively to Mr. Newlands, only occasionally remarking:

"That's good."
"Hear him."
"That's the talk."

Presently Mr. Newlands alluded to the prosperity that struck the great states of Ohio and Illinois when irrigation came there.

Here Farmer Sweeney became greatly interested and rising to his feet remarked:

"Say Boss, wasn't that when the Democrats had control? You bet your life it was. When the Democrats get control of Nevada, you'll see irrigation."

"Sit down," shouted several voices.

"Sit down eh? Well I like that put a rancher down in an irrigation convention. That makes me laugh."

"Mr. Sweeney, sit down," said the Chairman.

"Sit down, yourself," was the reply. I'd like to see the color of a man who could sit me down."

Here General Clarke whispered a few words in Farmer Sweeney's ear, and he became mollified.

"All right, General, I'm with ye," and he walked out.

As he reached the door there was a clapping of hands, and like a flash he turned around and enquired:

"Show me a son-of-a-gun that will clap his hands when a Nevada farmer is put out of an irrigation convention. Just show me one."

Here Mr. Bonfield of Winni mucca clapped his hands, and Farmer Sweeney lifting a chair, waited it over in the direction of the Humboldt attorney, but the damage was slight.

Here Farmer Treadway grabbed Farmer Sweeney and they rolled over on the floor, and several people grabbed Farmer Sweeney bodily and lifted him out of the door.

"Elect a Sargeant-at-Arms," suggested several.

"Yes," shouted Sweeney; "elect Jewett Adams; he'd be just the man to put me out. Elect him right off."

For a time nothing more was seen of Mr. Sweeney.

After reaching the street Farmer Sweeney sought to rouse the ranchers to a sense of the wrongs he had suffered, but failing to find any on the street he entered the hall by the rear and called out the Secretary of the Convention, Mr. Colburn, and the editor of the APPEAL.

"Boys," he said, "I want to make one request. Take me on the platform and introduce me to the Convention. I want to tell 'em what I know about irrigation and alfalfa. I'm the boss rancher of the valley and I want to give 'em my views, and if I can't do that I'm goin' in to clean out the President and Vice President, Secretary and shorthand reporters.

"Say, Sam, go in and ask Sweeney's shorthand reporter if he'll report my speech."

"Can't do it, John," said the editor of the APPEAL; "they fired me out just after they did you."

"I know why; because you took a premium for garden truck at the Fair. As soon as I saw the blue ribbon on old Saratoga I knew they would fix it to down you."

"Ain't it awful how us ranchers are treated?" he continued, shedding tears.

"Say Sam can I get a place on your ranch at thirty dollars a month?"

"Can you handle onions?" Just show me the onion I can't handle, bring it on."

"Can you handle early whites?"

"Certainly, Earl White or Jack White. I can handle the whole White family. Bring me any one, big or little and I'll handle 'em for a thousand a side."

"All right, lets go out and handle 'em."

Mr. Sweeney went down the back steps to look for "Earl White" and "handle him." Then he got in front of the hall again and walked in. Then he began to speak again:

"Mr. Chairman, tell me any one of these ducks that have been talking who ever raised a bushel of wheat in this state?"

(Laughter and confusion.)
"I tell you there ain't any. I'm the only rancher straight up that's here."

"Say Mr. Chairman, did you ever raise an acre of alfalfa in this State? Hundred dollars to a bit there ain't a man in the hall who can tell a hinge-tooth harrow from a McCormack header. Hundred dollars to a bit they cant. (Laughter) Look at these newspaper men. They're all barnacles on the public. They don't do a lick on earth except to lie about the ranchers and they have a soft thing while I'm out sweatin' my heart out and puttin' in early rose potatoes on a side hill and keepin' the ditches mended in my rye field."

(Laughter, and shouts of "Put him out.")

"Show me the man who can put me out, bring him on. This is a packed convention, packed agin the hard workin' ranchers and spud raisers. I'm the boss spud raiser in Orm—"

Here there was great confusion mingled with laughter, hisses, applause and cries of "sit down, put him out."

Here Mr. Kinney of Empire grabbed Sweeney about the waist and lifting him high in air carried him to the door. Farmer Sweeney on reaching the open air invited Mr. Kinney to take a drink and they went across the street. Farmer Sweeney remarking, as he lifted his glass: "Nevada Irrigation, long may she wave."

There is no Secret

About your buying shoes to advantage. You may not know any more about the quality of leather than you do about a lost comet but that is no reason why you should get "stuck." Either you get your money's worth or you don't and if you don't it is your own fault. We are in the shoe business because we happen to know something about shoes and leather. It is "bread and butter" to us, therefore we make it a STUDY. Of the knowledge you get as much benefit as though you possessed it yourself for we place it entirely at your disposal and if you think that other houses can quote lower prices than we do, come and look at the goods and and prices. We will put our time against yours and we feel confident that the result will be a mutual benefit.
